Preparing our next workforce

As our economy ramps up, Western Nevada College is here to meet evolving industry demand. Given the significance of the economic downturn employer's skill needs will continue to change rapidly.

WNC proudly offers short-term certificates as well as degrees in fields like advanced manufacturing, information technology, building and healthcare. By continuing to adapt to fluctuating labor market demands with innovative programs including cybersecurity and paramedicine that reflect our community's shifting needs, students can prepare for exciting new career opportunities.

Additionally, WNC continues to develop students' workplace readiness skills. Across industries, employers are increasingly looking for employees with the ability to effectively communicate, work in teams and take initiative.

Local employers recognize that a robust set of soft skills can make a big difference as entry level employees begin contributing to work teams. WNC is proud to prepare our community's next nurses, EMTs, project managers and manufacturers.

Funding Students' Futures

Your team's participation and contribution to Golf for Education will support students who struggle financially to complete their degrees and certifications. As COVID-19 continues to destabilize our economy, education will become more important than ever to retrain and upskill displaced workers. Education will be key to our community's recovery. At the same time, displaced workers are often challenged to pay for training. While they may have the capacity and desire to shift gears and launch into more relevant, higher-paying career fields, funding may be a major obstacle in attaining new skills. While WNC offers affordable solutions at just $113 per credit hour, many students need help in the short-term. Funds raised from events like Golf for Education can be used for life-changing scholarships, emergency funding and book stipends.
